New Year, New Career: NextGen Jobs Calls for Next Generation of Young Superstars to Grasp Exciting Career Opportunities

NextGen Jobs, Australia's leading Group Training Organisation (GTO), has announced an immediate recruitment drive to fill 50 new apprentice and trainee vacancies, urging young Australians to take a closer look at the opportunities in careers that are future-proof — and get paid to learn!

"NextGen Jobs is looking to fill 50 full-time roles immediately. These aren't just jobs; these are genuine opportunities to take the first step on a lucrative, long-term career path," said NextGen Jobs General Manager Andrew Robson.

"We have a wide range of vacancies available now: automotive, business, green energy and many more, so the time has never been better to start a skilled career with high-quality employers," said Mr Robson.

"For too long, people have failed to appreciate the true potential of vocational pathways. However, the reality is that skilled apprentice and trainee qualifications offer not only great wage outcomes but also skills and careers unlikely to be affected by the onset of AI."

"If you are looking for a career that offers variety, challenge, and the chance to build something real, NextGen Jobs wants to hear from you. We have the vacancies, we have the employers, and we have the support systems in place to help each candidate succeed." Mr Robson added: "If you have a child, grandchild or friend's child looking to get into the workforce, tell them to take that all-important first step and give us a call on 1300 760 077 or visit nextgenjobs.org.au."
